The nutritional status of everyone represents a fundamental element to maintain a good health and it can be related to infectious agents in some disorders. Prevention, diagnosis and treatment of malnutrition should be included in the management of all patients in order to improve both short and long-term prognosis. In the nutritional management of these patients, the role of the community and hospital pharmacists is fundamental. They collaborate with clinicians, nutritionist, dieticians and speech therapists to choose the most appropriate nutrition, based on the clinical characteristics of the patient and on the availability of nutritional formulations in the therapeutic guide. This final meeting will outline the importance of combining study and practice for students and pharmacists. A number of modules of this Course has provide opportunities for the students to complete portfolios of evidence, mapping their competencies and outlining the skills that are necessary for a clinical pharmacist. The majority of offered modules and lectures and activities also offer either a mentor or non-mentor route to completion, allowing students to achieve work-based portfolio tasks in a way that most suits your current practice. We will distribute the final certification of the achieved skills in a cheerful and active situation.
